Author: Lawson McDowell (WWW.LawsonMcDowell.com)
Foreword Brigadier General Sally A. Eaves, U. S. Air Force (Retired)
General Eaves is a decorated veteran of the Vietnam War and Gulf War.

Description: In 1942, young Ginny Cooper joins millions of women staffing industrial jobs to keep the nation producing the weapons needed for victory. At a huge bomber plant near Omaha, Ginny encounters not only gender conflict, but also the deadly tentacles of an enemy cell – a cell that takes aim at the plant, America's beloved president, and Ginny herself. Amid the chaos Ginny discovers unexpected love.

On the other side of the world, Colonel Paul Tibbets is fighting his way across Europe and Africa on a course that will lead to Nebraska and the Enola Gay.

As Tibbets flies the Enola Gay to Japan on a mission no one was sure he'd survive, Ginny finds herself on the run from an evil that's been right in front of her all along.

Factoid: Offutt Air Force Base still uses the plant's former assembly buildings for a multitude of functions.

More: Ginny Cooper's War is Lawson McDowell's third historical fiction work. A career railroad executive and history researcher, Lawson targets often overlooked historical perspectives, adding impact and personal connection. For additional information, visit WWW.LawsonMcDowell.com.
